ION MINCU

ION MINCU – THE ARCHITECT

Ion Mincu (1852–1912) is considered the pioneer of the Neo-Romanian style and one of the most important figures in Romanian architecture. Trained at the École des Beaux-Arts in Paris, he chose to return to his homeland with a clear conviction: “Romania must build its own architectural identity.”

Through the Bufetul de la Șosea – Roadside Diner, Mincu integrated elements inspired by traditional architecture into the center of Bucharest – the porch, the gazebo, the carved wood – transforming them into an elegant urban language. He did not just build buildings, but laid the foundations of a school of architectural thought, influencing entire generations to come.

He also expressed his concept in his written testimonies, believing that the Romanian style would be appreciated and taken over by the architects of the future. At the anniversary banquet of the Society of Romanian Architects, on February 27, 1892, Ion Mincu expressed his vision of Neo-Romanian architecture: “Today, we only talk about the French and German schools, so I bow to the architects of our future who will only talk about the Romanian school.”

1892 – THE HOUSE BUILT AS A MANIFESTO

In 1889, construction began on a building that would become one of the architectural landmarks of modern Bucharest. Completed in 1892, the building was known as Bufetul de la Șosea – Roadside Diner, due to its location on the elegant Kiseleff Street – the favorite promenade of Bucharest society.

The initiative to create this representative restaurant is linked to Petre P. Carp, Minister of Public Works at the time. His vision was for a space worthy of the capital of the Kingdom of Romania, a place for refined meetings and elegant conversations.

The building, conceived as a representative space for Bucharest, which was in the midst of its European affirmation, was not just a restaurant, but a cultural statement. The gazebo with carved wooden columns, the arches inspired by the Brancovan style and the harmonious proportions expressed the desire for a Romanian architectural identity.

KISELEFF ROAD – THEATRE OF ELEGANCE

At the beginning of the 20th century, Kiseleff Road was the scene of the Capital's social life. Parades, events and the famous "Flower Fight" took place here, a spectacle of Bucharest's elegance and refinement.

After a carriage ride, the boyars, accompanied by their wives dressed in the latest Parisian fashion, retired to the building known as the "Roadside Diner" for refreshments or a late soup.

The building thus quickly became one of the most elegant places in the Capital and the favorite place for high society to stroll, witnessing the transformation of Bucharest from a Balkan city into a European capital.

BUFETUL DE LA ȘOSEA

20th CENTURY – CONTINUITY THROUGH CHANGE

Bufetul de la Șosea "Roadside Diner" soon became a landmark of Bucharest's social life. It survived World War I, the interwar period – when the city was nicknamed "Little Paris" – and the transformations brought about by World War II.

During the communist era, many historic buildings disappeared. This house remained. It was adapted and restored, but it preserved the essence of the original design. Its wood, arches and proportions continued to speak of an era in which Romania defined its cultural identity through architecture.

CASA DOINA

2003 – CASA DOINA

In 2003, “Bufetul de la Șosea” began a new chapter under the name “Casa Doina Restaurant”. The change did not mean a break with the past, but a reaffirmation of it. The contemporary “Casa Doina” combines respect for heritage with the refinement of the present while preserving the specific air of the Bucharest of old. It is a living space, where architectural tradition meets modern hospitality.

TODAY – CONTEMPORARY WITH HISTORICAL ROOTS

“Casa Doina” is not just a restaurant. It is a building that has crossed three centuries and several generations, preserving its identity. Each guest adds a new chapter to a story that began in 1892. Contemporary in spirit, but with deep roots in history, “Casa Doina” continues to be the place where the past and the present meet at the same table.
